

Kayne Griffin Corcoran

artnet®news

28 Can't-Miss Shows to See in the United States This Spring

Mary Corse's Untitled (2017). Courtesy of Kayne Griffin Corcoran, Los Angeles, Lehmann Maupin, New York, and Lisson Gallery, London.

From New York to Los Angeles, these are the art exhibitions that everyone will be talking about this coming season.

To celebrate the beginning of a spring that never seems to arrive, museums across the country are simply blooming with new programs to entice art-goers. From the never-before-seen sculptures of the late Jack Whitten in Baltimore to paintings fresh from the studio, here are the shows you don't want to miss out on.

-

22.

Mary Corse: A Survey in Light
Whitney Museum, New York
June 8 – November 25, 2018

On the East Coast, art institutions are also recognizing the vast contributions of California-born artists; the Whitney Museum is dedicating a career retrospective to Corse, who is known as a pioneering figure in the West Coast Art and Light movement, while just outside the city Dia:Beaconwill also host a selection of Corse's abstract works, opening in May.

—Caroline Goldstein & Sarah Cascone